

About Sand Casting

Sand casting is an art older than pewter itself.

To create each piece of Pewtarex™ metal-ware, an impression is made in sand, the impression is filled with molten metal, and the piece is formed. Each molded piece then receives a hand polished finish.

Every time a completed object is removed, its sand mold is destroyed in the process. Consequently, each piece is an original, created from its own unique mold.

Examine it critically. Pewtarex™ has the look and heft of quality.

Welcome to the World of Pewtarex™

With your purchase of Pewtarex™, a product of Olde Country Reproductions, Inc., you have joined a large and growing group of discerning collectors-- and users -- of a fine and durable decorative metalware.

Each piece an original

Like fine crystal, or rich pewter, objects made of Pewtarex™ are individually made. Each bears subtle surface markings that give it a character uniquely its own.

Each piece is individually cast in a sand mold and finished by hand.

Safe for Use with Foods

Pewtarex™ is a non-toxic alloy that is safe to cook in, to serve foods in, and to eat or drink from. It helps to keep hot foods hot longer and cold food and drinks cold.

Pewtarex™ may be used purely for decorative purposes, if you wish, but it is perfectly safe, durable, and attractive for food and drink service. It is not unusual to find this handsome metalware used in fine restaurants.

The Care of Pewtarex™

Pewtarex™ pieces should be hand washed in mild soap and warm water. Repeated exposure to harsh detergents or automatic dishwashing are not recommended, as they will cause eventual discoloring and loss of the soft patina of Pewtarex™.

If stains appear, use any fine pewter polish to remove them.

Repeated vigorous cutting of foods on Pewtarex™ plates will leave tiny scratches; many owners feel this contributes to the distinctiveness of the material.
